Groundwork for a 'jewel'?

City approves street & infrastructure scheme for ambitious chunk of West Sac waterfront

■ Meanwhile, Broadway Bridge proposal draws opposition from Sacramento residents

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Former mayor and current county supervisor Mike McGowan once predicted it would be "the jewel of West Sacramento."

That broad wedge of industrial land and rail spurs reaching north from the freeway along West Sacramento's riverfront – nicknamed the "Triangle" – may finally be closing in on its new future as an urban and urbane place to live, work and play. The city council last week approved a new layer of street and land use details designed to serve as the blueprint for this new future.

Katy Jacobson of the West Sacramento Redevelopment Agency reminded the council that the city had adopted a "specific plan" for the acreage back in 1993. That plan aimed for a "river city" made up of "pedestrian-friendly, Portland-sized city blocks."

The new plans for streets, infrastructure, and how to pay for them builds on that 15-year old plan, she said. But it also includes a lot of new refinements gleaned from new knowledge about urban planning.

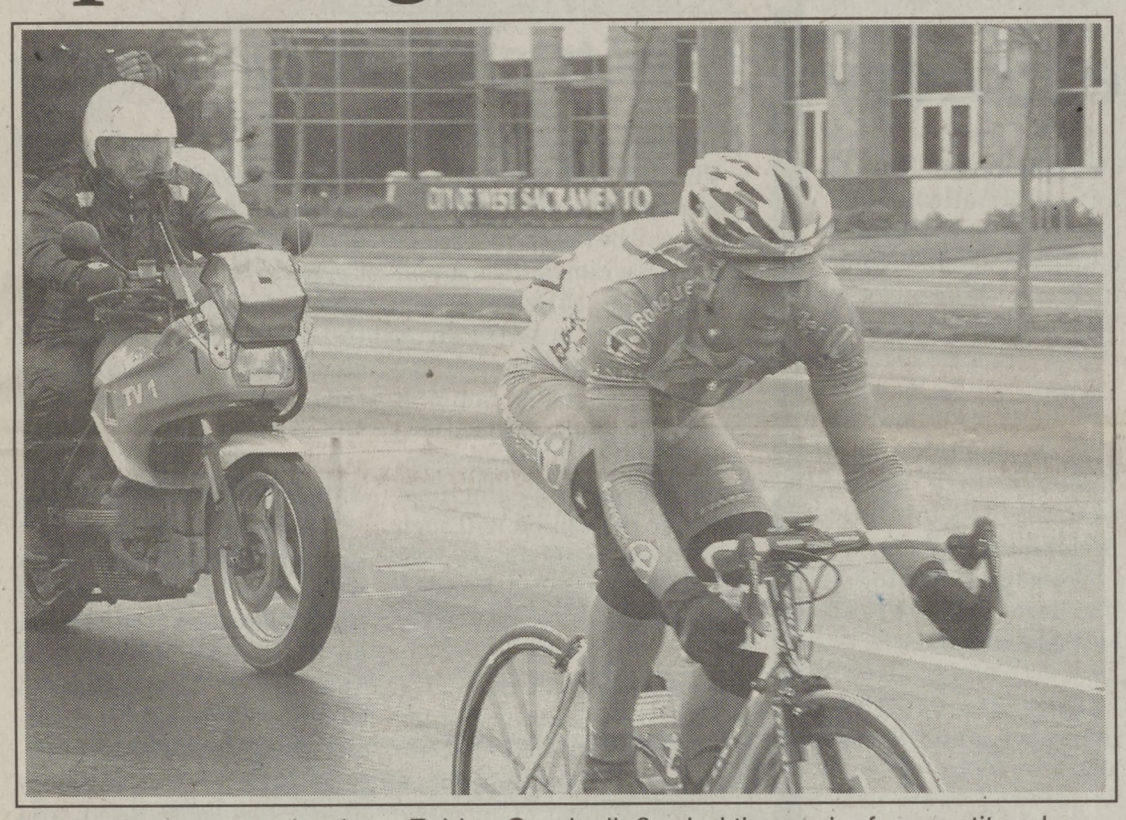
Sprinting to the finish —



The tour's temporary leader -- Fabian Carnicella? -- led the pack of competitors by only a few seconds as the race headed west on West Capitol Avenue at about 3 p.m. yesterday

Riders for the "Amgen Tour of California" whizzed down Sacramento Avenue, Jefferson Boulevard and West Capitol Avenue yesterday afternoon on their way to finish stage two of the 650-mile pro race in Sacramento. They were greeted in West Sacramento by drizzly skies and a scattered crowd of curious and enthusiastic spectators, who were fully ready to cheer for the riders.

The "Tour" lasts from Feb. 17 to Feb. 24, with the first stage in the Bay Area. The final, seventh stage is set to end near Los Angeles.

Yesterday's stage took the riders from Santa Rosa through wine country to Davis and Woodland before they entered West Sacramento from the north.

Rider Scott Nydam of the BMC team led the competitors for over 90 miles of the 116-mile race day, on a solo breakout. But he was caught by the pack, finally. Tom Boonen of Quick Step powered up in downtown Sacramento to cross the finish line first in the local stage, while Tyler Farrar of Team Slipstream ended up with the yellow jersey signifying the tour's current overall leadership.

Today, the tour engages in a hilly 103-mile run from Modesto to San Jose.

Trimming $1.1 million

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

School board members for West Sacramento's school district were scheduled to adopt a school staff labor contract, including a pay raise, at a special meeting yesterday. They were also scheduled to pass a resolution announcing their intention to cut $1.1 million from next year's budget.

The cuts are an attempt to anticipate reductions in state funding that are still being negotiated by Governor Schwarzenegger and the legislature. California itself is facing a large budget deficit.

"The worst case scenario based on the governor's January budget is we would have to cut $1.1 million," WUSD Superintendent Steve Lawrence told the News-Ledger yesterday. He added that these cuts are not as serious as those faced by many other California school districts.

"We're hoping to 'trim.' They're 'cutting,'" said Lawrence. "We're actually in pretty good financial condition when you look around the region or state-wide. I've heard some districts say they have to cut six or seven percent of their budgets. This $1.1 million would be approximately 1.5 to 1.6 percent of our budget."

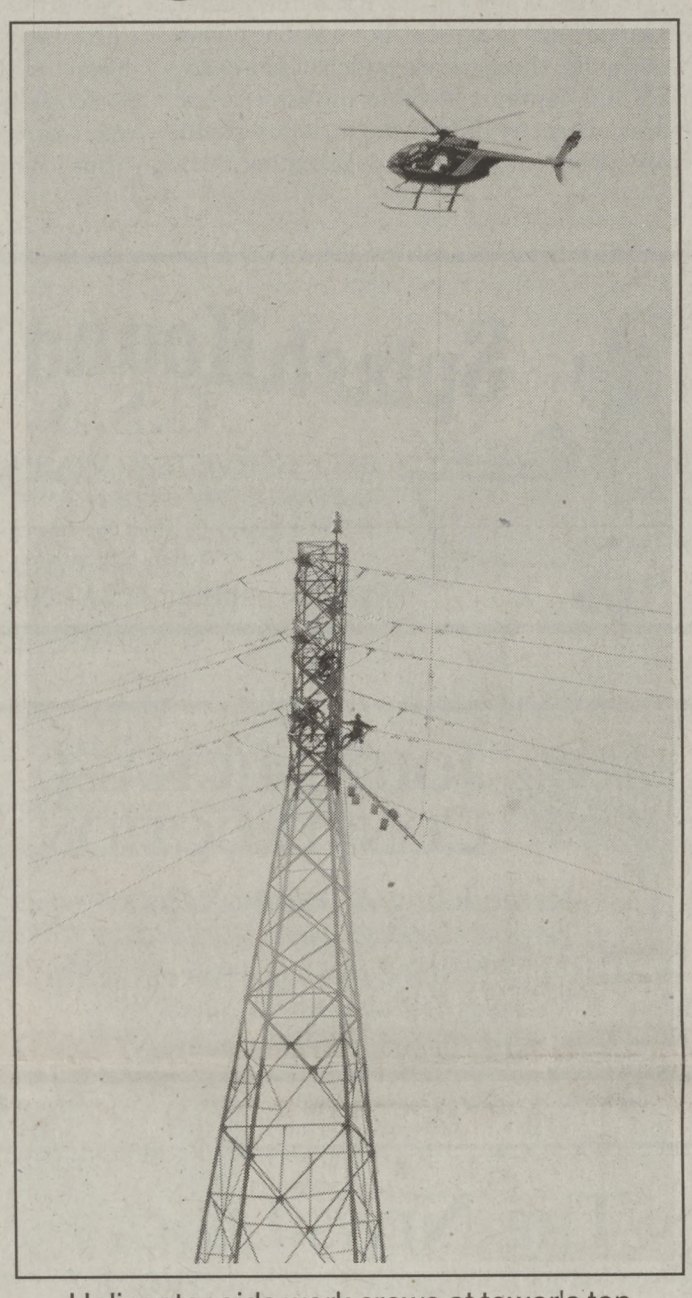
Lawrence added that a new teacher contract last year reduced the number of "prep periods" for high school teachers, thus reducing the number of teachers needed. And the planned transition to kindergarten-through-eighth grade elementary schools will lead to some savings among administrative positions. These help WUSD to be "in a pretty good situation" regarding cost savings, searching for only another $660,000 or so to save somewhere, he said.

"We're looking for ways to do cost savings instead of cuts," Lawrence commented. "We're really trying to ensure we don't cut any programs for children, which is what we're here for."

The superintendent has formed a committee of about 20 personnel, including representatives from each campus, to help look for places to save money or make cuts. That committee starts its work this week.

The $1.1 million target for savings could change as the state clarifies its budget plans, said Lawrence.

A high-up repair



Helicopter aids work crews at tower's top

News-Ledger photos

A barge carrying a crane headed for Richmond clipped 115,000-watt power lines over the West Sacramento barge canal Thursday at about 6:15 p.m., shutting down power to about 8,500 electricity customers in West Sacramento's south and to part of UC Davis. Over 600 of the Southport homes were without electricity through the night before being restored to service Friday morning.

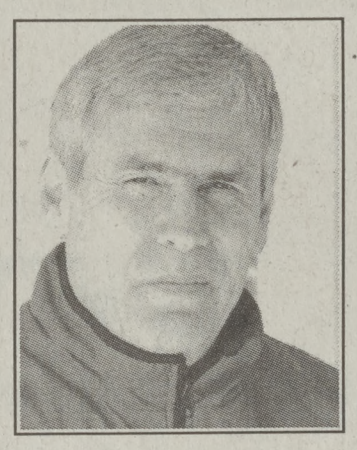
Power lines from the 230-foot towers, just west of the Port of Sacramento, hang to about 135 feet over the water.

On Friday, crews atop the towers worked to fix damage – aided by a helicopter which ferried personnel to the towers and helped move equipment.

The port was closed to boaters until the repairs were complete.

'Captain Sacto' and the golden era of cartoons

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

I was reading the Sacramento Bee during breakfast last Monday morning and at the bottom of the front page was a little promotional "kicker" encouraging readers to turn to page B1 to read the obituary of Harry Martin, who had entertained Sacramento children way back in the 1950s and 1960s as "Captain Sacto."

"Oh no," I mumbled to myself, quickly turning to page B1, "Captain Sacto has died."

"Captain who?" asked my youngest son, who was seated next to me at the breakfast table.

"Captain Sacto," I repeated more clearly.

"And just who in the world was Captain Sacto?" asked my son with interest.

Instead of answering, I began to read the obituary, written by Laurel Rosenhall, which began, "Harry Martin, the television personality who delighted Sacramento children with his `Captain Sacto' show in the 1950s and 1960s has died at the age of 81."

"Are you going to tell me who Captain Sacto was or not?" asked my son again.

"Well," I said, putting down the newspaper, "it's kinda hard to explain, but way back when I was young, there were a bunch of kid-shows on TV and Captain Sacto was my favorite one. He was played by Harry Martin, who was this really nice, funny, and easy-going man who wore an aviator captain's hat and had a secret airfield somewhere near town in a mysterious underground laboratory run by Dr. Xavier."

"What?"

"Anyway," I continued, "I guess all that doesn't really matter, because what Captain Sacto really did was introduce some of my favorite cartoons and I never missed his show."

"But I thought you hate cartoons."

"No, I just hate today's cartoons."

"So, what kind of cartoon's did this Captain Sacto guy have on his show that were so great?"

"Well, I can't exactly remember, but if you're asking me what kind of cartoons I liked when I was young, there were quite a few of them."

"Like what?"

"Well, have you ever heard of Rocky and Bullwinkle, and their evil friends Boris and Natasha?"

"Nope."

"How about Quick Draw McGraw and his sidekick Bobba-Louie?"

"Afraid not."

"Tennessee Tuxedo? Sherman and Peabody? Snaggle Puss? Crusader Rabbit?"

"No, no, no, and no."

"Felix the Cat, Clutch Cargo, Adam Ant, Speedy Gonzales, Heckle and Jeckle, Mr. Magoo?"

"Afraid not."

Anyway, it turned out that my son had at least heard of Yogi Bear, Tom and Jerry, Bugs Bunny, the Road Runner, Casper the Friendly Ghost and Inspector Gadget, but I was bitterly disappointed that he knew absolutely nothing about my all time favorite, Mighty Mouse.

"You've never once seen a Mighty Mouse cartoon?" I asked in disbelief. "He wore a cape, had a big `M' on his chest, he could fly, and he would come to people's rescue while singing `Here I come to save the day!'."

"I gotta tell you, Dad, that sounds like a rip-off of Superman if you ask me."

When I mentioned all this to a longtime friend of mine yesterday he said, "Kids nowadays are mostly into Japanese animation -- at least mine are -- and it's really violent and sexual -- like the video games they like. I'm afraid the days of those great old Warner Brothers and Hanna Barbera cartoons are long gone."

"Well," I said, "if you ask me, I think the world would be a whole lot better place if our kids were all watching Skipper Stu or Captain Sacto like we did."

"Skipper Stu?"

"He was just before Captain Sacto."

"Actually," said my friend, "both Skipper Stu and Captain Sacto were a little before my time. I was a big Cap'N Mitch fan, though. Remember him?"

"Oh, sure. Wasn't he the guy with the beard and the Navy hat and spyglass who would introduce cartoons with a big `cartoon ahoy!'?"

"That was Cap'N Mitch, alright. He lived in a really cool wheelhouse on a riverboat called the Valley Queen. Oh, and I also liked Bosun Bill because he played lots of Popeye cartoons."

"Well," I said, "I can still remember how Captain Sacto would fly in on his Air Force jet to start his show and all the great Bugs Bunny cartoons he would play. I'm sure Skipper Stu, Cap'N Mitch, and Bosun Bill were great, too, but Captain Sacto will always have a special place in my heart."

Harry Martin's obituary went on to mention that he worked for KCRA Channel 3 in Sacramento for more than 30 years and that in addition to being Captain Sacto, he had anchored the news, hosted evening magazine shows, and interviewed lots of famous celebrities over the years. It also said that he was a gentle, sweet and kind man who laughed easily and really loved his wife and kids, which doesn't surprise me at all, because that was the way he appeared to be on television. And to tell you the truth, I was so fond of Captain Sacto when I was young that while all the other kids in my West Sacramento neighborhood were starting to dream of someday becoming doctors and lawyers and teachers, all I really wanted to grow up to be was "Captain West Sacto".

By Richard Novoa

Hold on to your Kings tickets, fans, because the Sacramento Kings basketball president Geoff Petrie and the Maloof's sent Mike Bibby to Atlanta for four players and the Hawks' 2008 second-round draft pick. Yes, the Kings finally pulled the trigger and made the move that will set tone for Sacramento's franchise.

Bibby will join the playoff-hungry Atlanta Hawks while the Kings try and figure out where to play center Lorenzen Wright, and 6-9 forward Shelden Williams along with a couple of guards in Tyronn Lue and ex-Kings draft pick Anthony Johnson.

The Kings acquired Bibby in 2001 trade that sent Jason Williams to the Grizzlies.

With all these new players in town there were a few casualties from the trade. The Kings waived Justin Williams and Dahntay Jones.

With Mr. Bibby gone, the only hold over from the Kings 2002 playoff team is center Brad Miller. It looks like the Kings are going with Beno Udrih at the point to run the offense while they try to revamp the Kings and clear up some salary cap issues. Stay tuned because the trade deadline is on Feb. 21st and the Kings still could package Ron Artest to the Denver Nuggets, who are really interested in Artest.

On a positive note, the NBA's All-Star event turned out much better than anticipated, especially with young guns playing and having fun during the dunk contest. Dwight Howard stole the show with his big smile and outlandish dunks.

Also, it looks like Jason Kidd will be wearing a new uniform if the league approves another deal put together by Dallas owner Mark Cuban. It will involve a lot of players, but the bottom line is Cuban doesn't want to get left behind in the playoff run, especially with the Lakers adding Gasol and the Suns bringing in the Shaq to help out Steve Nash and Company.

Oh, did I mention the East won the game 134-128 and LeBron James was crowned the MVP of the game? Next year's All-Star game will be held in Phoenix at the US Airways Center.

Kings Korner

Don't miss the return of Mike Bibby to the Arco Arena on Wednesday night (7 p.m.-CSN) against Atlanta Hawks.

After the Hawks leave town the Kings will begin a five-game road trip that will take them to Charlotte on Friday (7:30 p.m.-CSN) and then on to Orlando for a Sunday (3 p.m.) game before they travel to Miami and Atlanta for back-to-back starting on Tuesday, February 26th.

The Kings will finish up in Dallas on Friday night (5:30 p.m.-CSN) before they return home against the Shaqless Heat on Sunday, March 2nd.

Enjoy your day – see ya next week!

The Triangle is planned for mixed uses including retail, offices, restaurants and residences. It's bordered by the freeway to the south, the river to the east, and West Capitol and the Tower Bridge approach cutting across the northwest. If the city can get some pesky rail lines moved, the Triangle Area will connect directly to West Capitol – for which the city also has grand ideas.

Plans for the Triangle include a grid of streets set on city blocks "too large to be one block and two small to be two blocks," said Jacobson. To address that problem, planners have borrowed an idea from other cities. They propose breaking up those blocks with through-paths called "universal streets" designed to serve businesses and create better options for pedestrians.

The concept is similar to Maiden Lane in San Francisco, she said.

"They're sixty feet wide with a 20-foot wide pedestrian and emergency vehicle access," explained Jacobson. "Restaurant seating can spill out onto them. They also can be closed off – in some jurisdictions, they're referred to as 'festival streets.'" The streets are private, but with "easements" guaranteeing some public use.

The master plan also calls for small urban parks to be built appropriately in the Triangle to serve whatever purpose the location calls for – a "tot park," for example, near apartment centers. And the plan includes a long angled avenue cutting from southwest to northeast, focusing visual attention on the Tower Bridge landmark at its northeastern end. Also in the plan is a riverfront plaza park.

Councilman Mark Johannessen applauded the focus on creating intimate spaces for people to gather.

"We've got to get away from big streets – if we want to get intimacy, we have to tighten them. I think of Mardi Gras in New Orleans – those streets aren't wide at all. People crowd in there, and it's fun. If you go to nightclubs, you (want to) go to one that's crowded."

Councilman Wes Beers noted that the new level of planning included specific street locations based on real engineering. The 1993 plan was merely conceptual.

"We have a real engineering plan, and we have real roads that actually work," said Beers.

Mayor Cabaldon said the new plan includes improvements such as aiming for park space that will actually be useful:

"Instead of recreating Capital Mall, where the only people who use them are the people mowing them, we (are planning for) 'tot lots' and that sort of thing," said Cabaldon.

Developer Mark Friedman of the Fulcrum Group – owners of property just north of the freeway – joined other landowners in supporting the plan and the efforts and negotiations that went into it. Friedman said he hopes to have a development agreement with the city signed by the end of summer for his acreage. The property had been in contention for a large new state office building until the state put the project on hold this year.

Warren Smith, who helped build Raley Field and bring the River Cats to West Sacramento, also did some cheerleading for the plan.

"We're not a large landowner, and we're not a developer, but we absolutely need to see the Triangle developed sooner rather than later," said Smith. Raley Field is located in the northern part of the Triangle.

Left uncertain in the plan is how much land along the river the state will require to be left undeveloped as a flood buffer. If the state requires a larger "setback" than city planners and developers propose, it will reduce the amount of development available to help share the burden of paying for infrastructure.

The council approved the new street and infrastructure plans while asking to revisit some issues.

On another topic, Mayor Christopher Cabaldon reported to the council that residents of Sacramento's Curtis Park and Land Park neighborhoods have expressed opposition to plans to build a new bridge connecting Sacramento's Broadway Boulevard area across the river to Jefferson Boulevard in West Sacramento.

"The principal main concern is impacts on (Sacramento) neighborhood streets — that there will be cut-through traffic in those neighborhoods," Cabaldon remarked.

But he added that a traffic study is needed "to be able to address those impacts in a meaningful way," and "the largest concern of cut-through traffic would be for us. Folks would be tempted to use the Broadway Bridge to cut through (to Jefferson Boulevard in West Sacramento) and avoid the backup at I-80 and I-5."

The idea is still under study.

ABSOLUTE ASSURANCE AT HAND FOR RICE MILL THAT WILL SOON BE BUILT

CONTRACT WAS AWARDED IN WOODLAND LAST WEDNESDAY. WORK TO START IMMEDIATELY

That all the publicity that has been given to the building of the rice mill in this section of Yolo County was not brag there seems to be no mistake now, for already the contract for the construction of one mill has been let.

This has been verified by the following dispatch from Woodland:

"Woodland, May 30.—Contracts for the construction of the $250,000 National Rice Mill in West Sacramento have been awarded to E. L. Younger, and construction will begin at once.

The mill, which will be a four-story concrete structure, will be ready, it is announced, in the fall in time to handle the crops of the Sacramento Valley. In addition to the mill, there will be a warehouse with a capacity of 20,000 cubic feet.

The Woodland men interested in the new plant are C. F. Thomas, W. G. Stephens, F. L. Mattel, C. S. Morse of San Francisco is also interested in the mill."

This mill will be located about 1000 feet south of the Sacramento Valley Dock and Warehouse.

This plant is entirely different and distinct from that to be built by the California State Rice Milling Company. It will be, however, of about the same size and capacity. A large warehouse for the storage of rice will also be a feature of the plant.

Mr. C. S. Morse, formerly of the Pacific Rice Mills of San Francisco, which operates mills at the bay and at Biggs, has been here during the week and has carried on all the negotiations for the plant.

The mill will be on the line of the Northern Electric Railroad and will have rail and water transportation facilities. It will be built just south of the mill of the California State Rice Milling Company.

These two rice mills will center the rice milling industry of California, and will mean much for the future development of this community.

This makes a total of five big industries for West Sacramento. Aside from these two rice mills, there is the bean cleaning plant of the Sacramento Dock and Warehouse Company already in operation, and the dehydrating vegetable plant of the E. C. Horst Company, under construction. The Valley Seed Company is likewise to have a big seed cleaning establishment here.

NEW TRANSPORTATION COMPANY TO OPERATE ON RIVER

River Transportation Company, San Francisco, has been authorized by Commissioner of Corporations H. L. Carnahan, to sell and issue shares of its capital stock. The company proposes to operate freight steamers on the Sacramento River.

It is permitted to sell 10,000 shares of its preferred stock at par, $10 per share, to net not less than 85 per cent of the selling price ,and to issue a like number of shares of common to Herbert Harvey and his associates for promoting the enterprise, upon the condition that they waive any dividends on the common until the holders preferred have been repaid the full amount of their investment plus interest ,at the rate of 7 per cent per annum. The common and preferred thereafter to share ratably in any further profits.

The company proposes to build vessels of shallow draft embodying the tunnel type of construction so that they may navigate the upper river as far north as Red Bluff, where freight steamers have not run regularly for several years. Subscriptions to preferred shares are to be contingent upon securing subscriptions for not less that $60,000 so that the company will have enough subscribed to be assured of the construction of one vessel to cost approximately $20,000, an auxiliary barge, and the necessary working capital.

Commissioner Carnahan also has authorized the following permits:

Square Turn Tractor Company, Los Angeles—To sell 10,000 shares of its capital stock at pay, $10 per share, for cash, so as to net not less that 85 per cent of the selling price.

The company is engaged in the manufacture of farm tractors.

Biltwell Company, Los Angeles—To issue to M. A. Leach, and L. G. Martin, 150 shares of its capital stock in exchange for the property and assets of that certain business heretofore conducted by them, and to sell 500 shares of its common stock at par, $100 per share, for cash, so as t onet the whole selling price.

The company is engaged in the business of the manufacture and repair of auto bodies and tops.

Mechanics Hotel Company, San Pedro—To sell one share each to the directors at par, $10 per share, for cash; to issue 1500 shares to F. J. Lung and Bertha Johnson in exchange for certain real property; to issue 300 shares in exchange for services rendered, and to sell 18,195 shares at par for cash, so as to net 80 per cent.

The certificates representing the shares issued to F. J. Lung and Berthat Johnson are to be deposited and held as an escrow.

The company proposes to erect and furnish a frame hotel building of 150 rooms.

MORE BUSINESS DEMANDS LARGER TIRE QUARTERS

During several years the firm of Schmidt Bros., dealers in tires, has been located on Eleventh street between J and K, but the growth of the concern became so marked that lately it has become necessary to use larger quarters.

A week ago the firm moved to a new building at 1205 K street where it is now comfortably installed in commodious quarters and with a new stock of goods and added complement of material.

The growth of Schmidt Bros. in the tire line is mostly attributed to the eternal attention these men give their business.

Not only will they sell the pneumatic tire in future but they have added a complete stock of mechanical rubber goods such as belting, steam hose, garden hose, and solid rubber tires for trucks and automobiles.

In their new place of business they will continue their former policy and if possible improve on it.

The Red Cross Executive Committee of Red Bluff had to use force to make some of the worthy citizens of the community subscribe to the Red Cross fund.

What could be expected coming from a dry town?

The Yolo Independent is on sale at Gray's News Agency, 429 K street, Sacramento, and at the Post Office in Washington.

RED CROSS QUOTA OVERSUBSCRIBED IN WASHINGTON

At a meeting of the Red Cross Drive Committee held last Tuesday evening in the Town Hall the completed figures for this district of Yolo County showed how splendidly the people responded to the call of help.

The quota apportioned to Washington was $1480 while the subscriptions amounted to $1771.55. Several reports that were still out will raise the total subscriptions to nearly $2000.

The subscriptions in this locality were as follows: Cash, $544.25; pledges, $763.75; pledged in Sacramento from Washington, $463.55.

The committee will make the postoffice its headquarters ,and from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. on the 1st and 2d, 14th and 15th of every month members will be on hand to collect on the Red Cross pledges.

Bits & pieces

The "Amgen Tour of California" returned to West Sacramento yesterday largely because this city makes a good front door to the state capital, which provided such a warm welcome to the race last year. Exact routes for the Tour change from year to year, but organizers made sure to bring the tour back to the capital for to end another stage. That meant that West Sacramento hosted the race again, too, as the riders sped from Santa Rosa to the capitol yesterday.

For those few hundred West Sacramentans who line the streets to watch the bikes whiz by at 30 miles per hour, the race is a treat. The local crowds, though, were nothing like those in some of the other cities that play host to the tour, including Sacramento. As a race-watching venue, Sacramento has the advantage of a fully developed downtown set up to play host to spectators. Also, the race is designed to end there in a series of several circuits. Viewers in Sacramento could see the race whiz past not just once, but three times. And the final yards of that race play host to the scramble and strategy of a sprint to the finish.

It's easy, and it's fun, to watch the race in West Sacaramento. But with the dramatic final laps planned for Sacramento, where cyclists do three circuits and a sprint before the flag is waved, it's tough to see how West Sacramento can compete as a site for Tour spectators. It's all over so quickly here.

Don't write off those grand schemes so fast.

Plans for an exciting downtown and waterfront area in West Sacramento may still seem "pie in the sky" right now, especially as we teeter on the brink of a recession (or perhaps in the depths of one). But the plans will surely bear fruit within a couple of decades.

Someday, you may take your family to West Capitol Avenue, or to the railroad area south of the Tower Bridge in West Sacramento, for a good time. And you'll have one.

Twenty years ago, there were people still scoffing at the city's Southport Framework Plan. Who, they wondered and scoffed, would ever want to build new subdivisions in southern West Sacramento?

Musings

A piece of mail arrived this week to announce Christopher Cabaldon's bid to serve in the state assembly. In general, I was not at all surprised at the promotion, but under the heading of service as the mayor of West Sacramento, it was stated that he built Raley Field. I must have slept through it, for I've never even seen him wearing a hard hat.

I found the electrical blackout that occurred on February 14th most entertaining, as well. Supposedly, there was a 35% increase in the birthrate nine months following the New York City blackout of July, 1977, but the claim is nothing more than an urban myth. However, the power was out at my house in Southport from just after 6:00 p.m. until almost 11:30 p.m. on the recent Valentine's Day. Since one of my children is thought to have been conceived on February 14, 1985, it would not surprise me at all to discover a spike in our city's birth rate around November 14. 2008. If such should be validated, I suggest consideration of a new slogan for our town. Now what would it be?

'Public relations piece'

In the February 6, 2008 edition of your paper you ran a front page article entitled, "Park, Indian center planned," highlighting the city's efforts to develop, in conjunction with the California Department of Parks and Recreation, the California Indian Heritage Center.

As the paper of record for the City of West Sacramento, you have a journalistic duty to provide a balanced discussion of that project. At best, the article is a public relations piece prepared by the State Parks department. At worst, the article fails to present the information this community needs to evaluate the city's intent to transfer public lands to the State of California.

The article holds in suspicion members of The Rivers development who have organized themselves for the purpose of gathering information. I would encourage your paper to do the same — undertake a full and objective investigation of this project and perform your duty to educate and inform the residents of this community about the benefits and costs of the project.

Tax money fights gangs

The Sacramento Bee published a story the other day about how the Bush Administration is giving our tax dollars to prosecutors around the country specifically earmarked for implementing gang injunctions.

This is bizarre. For what purpose? Are these all Republican prosecutors? Like Mr. Reisig? Whether Mr. Reisig gets his marching orders from someone else or not is a real good question. This question and many others need to be answered. I have emailed the D.A.'s office three or four times asking for a response of some kind, and they don't even bother to respond at all. The silence we hear from all our elected officials on these issues speaks very loud. Is this no big deal to them? Or maybe it is just too hot a potato? You know, "can't make waves, got to get reelected?"

Let's hope one of them will show some guts and take the lead and help us get to the bottom of this. The letter last Wednesday that spoke of crime statistics illustrates just how weak the D.A.'s case is. The fact that there were ten or twelve of the areas best lawyers volunteering to represent the so-called "Broderick Boys" at their hearing also speaks to the degree of apprehension there is among the legal community about what's going here in West Sacramento.

These are very important issues at this time, especially with the Bush Administration and the Republican-controlled Congress already having started us down the slippery slope. These guys work for us, and they should not have some other agenda, like getting reelected or rich. The time for public officials thumbing their noses at us needs to end. Our democracy depends on it.

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

Running time: 84 minutes
MPAA rating: PG-13

"Meet the Spartans" is the latest affront to comedy by the makers of "Epic Movie" and "Date Movie." It's supposed to be a spoof of last year's "300," but really it's nothing but an hour or so's worth of gay jokes, poop jokes and profoundly unfunny pop culture references.

I'm tempted to say that "Meet The Spartans" is the worst movie ever made, but I will resist that temptation because I don't want anyone reading this review to think, "Oh, it can't be THAT bad," and then go to theater and find out I was right.

Someone needs to let writer/directors Jason Friedberg and Aaron Seltzer know that in order to make a comedy, you first need to know HOW JOKES WORK. Simply making a pop culture reference is not a punchline. Having one of your characters turn into a giant robot so you can reference the "Transformers" movie from last year isn't a joke. Having celebrity lookalikes who don't look like the celebrities they're supposed to be lampooning, so that characters have to constantly refer to them by name, "Look, it's Paris Hilton," is also an overused gag.

Although the official running time is listed as 84 minutes, that's not exactly true. The film is only 64 minutes long — barely an hour. The remaining 20 minutes is the ending credits featuring scenes that didn't make the main movie.

Now, I'm no lawyer, but I'm pretty certain that inflicting this film onto the American public qualifies as a hate crime.

Don't become a victim.

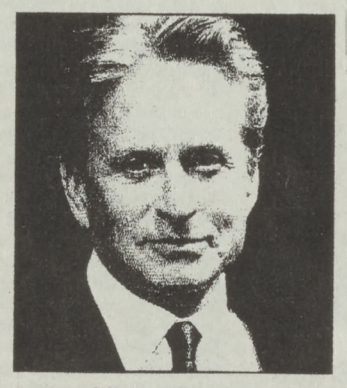
HOLLYWOOD



Michael Douglas

HOLLYWOOD ... Heather Locklear, so familiar on the small screen, is set to make a movie for the big one. It's tentatively titled "Flirting With 40," and is about a divorced mother of two kids on the brink of her 40th birthday who falls in love with a much younger man. She soon learns life really CAN begin at 40. The film is based on the novel by Jane Porter. ... Heather, 46, is one of Tinseltown's favorites. Everybody likes her. She once announced to one and all: "Having to sit like a lady isn't one of my favorite things. It's nicer to be comfy. So, I mostly wear pants, and not a skirt."

Emilio Estevez is a multi-talented man. This son of Martin Sheen writes, acts and directs. His next film will be "The Public," which he wrote. He will star in and also direct this story of libraries becoming the home for many derelicts and the mentally ill. They wander into these public places and make their homes among the shelves until they are discovered and evicted. In his private life, Emilio was once married to Paula Abdul.

Julia Roberts will leave the bambinos with nannies in the daytime while she makes a movie. She will act in AND produce "Hothouse Flowers," about a Manhattan divorcee who trades her staid life for one of adventure. More about casting and etc. when we find out. Meanwhile, the Moders "just keep rolling along."

Michael Douglas, his hair tinted a nice soft reddish color, has signed on for "Beyond a Reasonable Doubt," about a journalist who sets out to expose a corrupt district attorney by setting himself up as the suspect in a murder he didn't commit. Douglas plays the D.A. As time goes by, Michael is looking more and more like his father, Kirk Douglas, looked in his younger days. In his private life, Michael is a happy husband to Catherine Zeta-Jones and a fun and loving father to his kids.

Fatal Revenant: The Last Chronicles of Thomas Covenant (Book Two)
by Stephen R. Donaldson
(Putnam Adult, $27.95)
Reviewed by Chris Richcreek

When readers finished the first book of Stephen R. Donaldson's fantasy series "The Last Chronicles of Thomas Covenant," heroine Linden Avery was at Revelstone, the main fortress of the Land, and could see that riding toward her on horses were her adopted, mute son, Jeremiah, and Thomas Covenant, the famed hero of the Land and her former lover who died at the end of "The Second Chronicles of Thomas Covenant." It was a great ending twist.

"Fatal Revenant" picks up where "Runes of the Earth" left off, then twists things in a few more directions.

Covenant apparently has returned, but his explanations are strange, and he does not display the same personality as before. Instead, he's much harsher toward Linden. He has his reasons, but are they believable? The formerly unresponsive Jeremiah can now communicate, and it appears he idolizes Covenant.

Linden, in possession of the Staff of Law, the even more powerful white gold and her own doubts, has a hard time getting on top of the situation, and before the book is over, she will travel back in time, meet noted figures of the Land's past, encounter powerful forces and take on formidable opponents.

Donaldson continues to weave a complex tapestry in "Fatal Revenant," the second of four planned books for the final chronicles (and eighth of 10 books overall in the Thomas Covenant series). His writing can be somewhat wordy (enthusiasts of the word "puissance" will enjoy how many times it shows up in its various forms), but the book presents an engaging tale.

Ultimately, at the end of "Fatal Revenant," the reader is hit by one more twist, along with a desire to get the next book. Alas, "Fatal Revenant" arrived three years after "Runes of the Earth," which means Thomas Covenant fans likely have three more years to ponder what comes next.

Books reviewed in this column are available online or at your local bookstore.

Fave Foods OF THE FAMOUS

by Steven Austin

Natalie MacLean

To fund her late-night vinous habits, Natalie MacLean holds down day jobs as a wine writer, speaker and judge. An accredited sommelier, she is a member of the National Capital Sommelier Guild, the Wine Writers Circle and several French wine societies with complicated and impressive names. You'll see her wine columns and consumption advice in magazines like Gourmet, Conde Nast Travel, Food & Wine and many others. At the World Food Media Awards in Australia, Natalie was named the World's Best Drink Writer.

In her award-winning book, "Red, White and Drunk All Over: A Wine-Soaked Journey from Grape to Glass," MacLean chronicles her past three years sipping, spitting and slogging her way through the international wine world to visit some its most evocative places and to meet some of its most charismatic, obsessive and innovative characters. She proudly declares, "My unswerving goal in life is to intimidate those crusty wine stewards at fine restaurants with my staggering knowledge!" For more pinpoint observations and humorous tales, go to: www.nataliemaclean.com

A little history lesson for readers. Who made the first wine?

"A thirsty young shepherd in Europe! Actually, no one knows for sure, though it was likely discovered accidentally when natural yeasts fermented grapes left out in a clay jar."

Reds with beef. Whites with fish? Does that still hold up today?

"Yes and no. Yes, because the old guidelines still apply to the extremes. That is, I wouldn't pair a delicate white fish with a heavy red wine. The wine would overwhelm the fish. However, white wines no longer mean light only, and can therefore be matched with red meats. Conversely, a silky, delicate pinot noir goes swimmingly with salmon."

Ever tasted a wine that was so bad you spit it out?

"You must be referring to my cousin's homemade wine that they served at their wedding: Tony and Tanya's True Love Forever Chablis. We all hoped that the marriage would mature more gracefully than the wine."

You have $15 in your pocket and have to bring a bottle of American wine to a party. Give us a few choices.

"2005 Markham Wines Glass Mountain Chardonnay, Napa Valley, Calif.: A good balance in this chardonnay with green apples and oak. 2006 Ironstone Vineyards Obsession Symphony, Sierra Foothills, Calif.: I love this wine with its floral notes. Columbia Crest 'Two Vines' Shiraz 2002: A pleasant, balanced, medium- to full-bodied red with notes of plums and dark berries. You can find lots more wine picks here: www.nataliemaclean.com/wine_picks."

Most wine you ever consumed in one day?

"Two bottles. I couldn't help it, as the dinner party was six hours long and the wines were spectacular!"
